OPTIMAL PERFORMANCE

Overview

Convergence analyzed the 2019 Form ADV Filing season for Quality

- Quality is defined by the accuracy, consistency and frequency of filings
- We examined 13,252 filings and kudos to the 95% of Advisers that filed by 3/31/2020
- The quality scores of 2,351 Advisers are considered best practices, meaning they are higher than 85% of their peers. Peers groups are defined by the type of filer, e.g., Non-Exempt and Exempt with and without private funds.
- 104 of the 2,351 Advisers, or 0.79% of 13,252 filers, received perfect test scores, meaning there were no errors or inconsistencies in the 600+ tests conducted by Convergence.
- Convergence wants to congratulate the CCOs and supporting infrastructure groups who contributed to this great success.

What Differentiates Advisers in our Distribution

- Demonstrating one's commitment to a strong compliance culture has long been an arduous and impossible process. I know, I have supported the compliance efforts of many of the world's leading asset managers. Investors, regulators and others look for evidence that the Adviser has a strong commitment to compliance. My firm created an objective and independent way to measure an Adviser's commitment to compliance.
- No one will dispute the idea that strong compliance cultures require a true team effort. Think about the roles played by investment staff, investment operations, fund accountants, tax, investor relations and technology and the service providers in developing and delivery to Compliance the data they need to file.
- In fact, today's successful CCO needs to have a strong blend of technical and interpersonal skills to lead and manage the complicated effort required to meet their firm's regulatory requirements.

Why Quality Matters

- The SEC, and more frequently investors, look for Advisers that demonstrate a commitment to regulatory compliance.
- Convergence's ADV Analyzer is one way that Advisers can demonstrate their commitment to a strong compliance culture.
- The analysis, and any actions taken as a result, is an independent and verifiable piece of empirical evidence that can be offered to regulators and investors to demonstrate your commitment to regulatory compliance.
- It will differentiate you among other Advisers when marketing your funds.
- It will differentiate you during “routine or sweep based exams” that are conducted by the SEC.
